Biographical note:

Dia Anagnostou is a Senior Research Fellow at ELIAMEP and Assistant Professor of Comparative Politics at Panteion University of Social Sciences. Anagnostou has held research positions at Princeton University and the European University Institute in Florence, and she has coordinated or been involved in several international research projects. Anagnostou is an expert on comparative politics, human rights and European governance. Her research has focused on the influence that international law, courts and supranational institutions exert in rights protection, specifically in relation to gender equality, minorities, migrants and vulnerable groups. Anagnostou has over fifteen years of experience as coordinator or partner in several research projects on human rights, international legal institutions, and EU policies, mostly funded under the European Commission's framework programs.
